Union slams drug screen

TTC workers to undergo random breath and saliva tests ◗ 'It's standard, it's safe and it's proven technology': Ontario Safety League president ◗ Execs agree to testing protocol, too

About half the TTC's workforce — from drivers and supervisors to track-level maintenance workers — will soon be subject to random drug and alcohol testing.

City councillors on the Toronto Transit Commission approved the measure yesterday, as a deterrent to substance abuse on the job that they believe will improve public safety.

The move comes despite harsh objections by the transit workers' union, which is accusing the TTC of violating employees' right to privacy by enforcing random breath and saliva tests.

The decision will make the TTC the first transit agency in Canada — except some cross-border bus companies — to conduct broad, random screening.

TTC chief general manager Gary Webster estimated that about 10 per cent of the 6,000 TTC workers considered to be in safety-critical jobs would be subjected to random testing under the expanded fitness-for-duty policy in a given year.

"Sleep deprivation is probably our biggest impairment within the (transportation) industry."
BOB KINNEAR, AMALGAMATED TRANSIT UNION LOCAL 113 PRESIDENT

Amalgamated Transit Union Local 113 president Bob Kinnear threatened legal action and accused the TTC of misleading the public.

"The testing they're proposing will not determine impairment. It will, however, determine what has been consumed by that individual over the last three weeks," he said.

Teacher, pupils can be 'friends': Cop

Facebook can — and should — be a teacher's friend, the Toronto police social media officer told an educators' conference.

The social networking site can be used for mentoring, building relationships and can help prevent teen suicides, gang activity and even crimes, Const. Scott Mills told more than 100 teachers, principals and social workers at a Canadian Safe School Network conference held yesterday in Toronto.

"We stopped a Virginia Tech type shooting here in this city," he said.

In September 2009, an elementary teacher noticed anti-Semitic postings threatening mass shootings of Jewish students through her Facebook connections. She reported it and someone was arrested.

Mills said that instead of blocking social media use, boards would be better off training teachers and then monitoring their use.

Earlier this year, the Ontario College of Teachers recommended teachers not "friend" students on Facebook or text them.

Man faces four murder raps

◐ 'Evil man' slapped with more than 50 firearms-related charges
◐ 3 described as innocent victims

Toronto police can't remember one man being responsible for four serial murders in the city, but they are accusing Mark Garfield Moore of just that.

Moore, 27, was arrested yesterday and charged with 54 offences, including four shooting murders that police described as premeditated and callous.

Moore is also accused of several drive-by shootings and a jewelry store robbery in which an employee was shot and wounded.

"The families of the victims described him best this morning. If these allegations are proven in court, he is an evil man," Det. Sgt. Hank Idsinga said at a news conference.

Several family members attended the news conference, but they did not speak to the media.

The victims

- Jahmeel Spence was killed Sept. 10, 2010. It's believed he was mistaken for someone else.
- In a double homicide on Sept. 29, 2010, Courthney Facey and Mike James were gunned down. Police say there was not "rhyme or reason" for the shooting.
- On Nov. 24, Carl Cole was shot after an alleged dispute.

Police aren't sure of the motivations for the murders.

Moore was well known to police and had been in the Don Jail on other charges since March when he was arrested on the homicide cases.

A night of gastronomic delights

Annual Eat to the Beat fundraising event brought nearly 600 foodies together at Roy Thomson Hall

Roy Thomson Hall was transformed into a cornucopia of gastronomic delights on Tuesday evening, all in the name of a good cause.

As nearly 600 guests — who had each paid $150 to attend the 16th annual Eat to the Beat fundraising event — wandered throughout the Roy Thomson's circular lobby sampling the sweet and savoury delights on hand, 60 of Canada's top female chefs prepped and served their specially-made creations.

Each one of the culinary wizards, from Donna Dooher of Mildred's Temple Kitchen to Anne Yarymowich of the AGO's Frank restaurant, donated both their time and talent to the evening which benefited the national charity Willow Breast Cancer Support Canada.

Raising funds

- To date, the Eat to the Beat fundraiser has raised $3.1 million for Willow — the national non-profit organization dedicated to providing women and their loved ones affected by breast cancer with free support programs.

From smoked duck breast on a sesame crisp with sea buckthorn and cranberries prepared by Lindsay Skoropada of the Stratford Chef School to soy-cured wild salmon on sushi rice and Asian pear created by the Spice Route's Winlai Wong, the savoury dishes on offer didn't disappoint.

"Honestly, I am overwhelmed. The food is endless," said Jolene Leon, who attended with her friend Maria. "I thought it would just be one little room with a few food stations. It's really spectacular. I wish they had an oxygen bar!"

George Restaurant's Tracy Wong, who served up a delectable hubbard squash cheesecake with cardamom roasted pearl pear with vanilla chantilly said, "I've heard so much about the event. I was so happy to jump on board and showcase this dessert. Squash is in season now and so we thought we'd play on that and see what we could come up with."

Strolling throughout the venue were ladies donning food-inspired corsets including French Onion Soup and the dessert Charlotte Russe. HEATHER BUCHAN

Stalker to stay in jail

Shania Twain fan was diagnosed with possible bipolar disorder, narcissistic personality disorder

A doctor who pleaded guilty to stalking superstar Shania Twain has been denied bail while arguments continue about his sentencing.

Giovanni (John) Palumbo's lawyer proposed release without supervision to his last known address, the Fairmont Royal York hotel in Toronto.

Palumbo, who had been absent throughout most of yesterday's hearing, appeared near the end and asked if he could instead be released to his family home in Ottawa.

The judge denied the request, saying some degree of supervision was necessary, prompting an outburst from Palumbo.

"You know, you're all very sick," he said. "You're not going to make me schizophrenic. You're not going to make me crazy."

Palumbo, 51, submitted surprise guilty pleas on Sept. 30, the second day of his trial, to charges of criminal harassment and to breaching a court order. He was arrested March 27 at the Air Canada Centre, where Twain was attending the Juno Awards.

His sentencing hearing resumes Nov. 15.

Hip-hop big shots reppin' booze: Study

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Jay-Z performs onstage at the iHeartRadio Music Festival at the MGM Grand Garden Arena last month in Las Vegas. Can some of his and other rappers' songs be considered advertising?

Brands mentioned most often were Patrón Téquila, Grey Goose Vodka, Hennessy Cognac, Cristal Champagne

If a rapper rhymes about Patrón Téquila, is it advertising?

That's the question being raised by researchers at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine in a study released today in the journal Addiction.

The researchers parsed 793 songs on Billboard Magazine's top 100 lists from 2005-2007 and found that 21.3 per cent of them referred explicitly to alcohol and of those, 24.3 per cent referred to alcohol by brand.

"Brand appearances are important to assess because they may function as advertising, whether or not they are paid for or sanctioned by the alcohol industry," according to the researchers, led by Dr. Brian Primack, an assistant professor at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine

Developing brand recognition is a crucial step in the marketing of any product, and companies strive to create buzz for their brands by paying for product placement in movies and television and — increasingly — music, says Dr. Primack.

Greg Cohen, director of corporate communications for Patrón Téquila, said the company has never solicited or paid for mention in any song.

Will Strickland, president of the Urban Music Association of Canada (UMAC), said "there's the thinking that this rap stuff is a monolith. But like everything else, it is a multifaceted and complex and complicated entity."

- In 2002, Busta Rhymes and P. Diddy released Pass the Courvoisier — sales of the cognac jumped 18.9 per cent and Courvoisier's parent company struck a promotion deal with Busta and P. Diddy's management company, the study says.
- In 2002, Jay-Z purchased a chunk of and became the face of Armadale Vodka, featuring it in the video and lyrics of All I Need.
- In 2008, Snoop Dogg became the face of Landy Cognac, featuring it in his single Luv Drunk.
- In 2010, 50 Cent and Tony Yayo collaborated on the single Pass the Patrón.

The City of Toronto holds public consultations as one way to engage residents in the life of their city. Toronto thrives on your great ideas and actions. We invite you to get involved.

Changes to Front Street at Union Station

Municipal Class Environmental Assessment Public Information Centre #2

We invite you to drop in to view project materials and speak one-on-one with the project team at this Public Information Centre:

Date: Thursday, November 3, 2011
Time: 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.
Location: Metro Hall, 55 John St. Room 309

Background
Union Station is the busiest transportation hub in Canada, serving upwards of 200,000 passengers every business day. As GO Transit expands, this number is expected to double in the next 10-15 years. To accommodate the additional pedestrian traffic crossing Front Street and to enhance the historic Station's civic setting, the City of Toronto is studying options to reconfigure Front Street West from Bay Street to York Street.

Proposed New Design
This second Public Information Centre will present the Preliminary Preferred Design, which includes:

- A grand civic plaza with new lighting, additional seating and granite pavement treatment
- A "table top" mid-block pedestrian crossing spanning the width of the plaza
- Significant sidewalk expansion with wider crosswalks at intersections and minimized crossing distances
- Modified lay-by-taxi, bus and private vehicle parking arrangements on both sides of the street
- Vehicle lanes reduced from two typical travel lanes in each direction to one wider travel lane in each direction

The Process
The study is being carried out as a Schedule C Municipal Class Environmental Assessment (Class EA), which includes identifying the problem/opportunity to be addressed, developing and evaluating a reasonable range of alternative solutions, and providing opportunities for public input at key stages.

We would like to hear from you.
Public consultation is an important part of this study. If you would like more information, please contact:

Turkey hits back after Kurds attack

Troops, bombers, gunships cross border into Iraq

Turkey retaliated dramatically yesterday after Kurdish rebels killed 24 soldiers and wounded 18 in attacks along the Turkey-Iraq border.

Turkish soldiers, air force bombers and helicopter gunships launched a swift incursion into northern Iraq.

"We will never bow to any attack from inside or outside Turkey," said Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

20
News reports said about 20 Kurdish rebels were killed in the fighting.

The rebels, who are seeking autonomy, have lately intensified their attacks against Turkey, killing security forces and civilians.

U.S. President Barack Obama condemned the "outrageous terrorist attack" against ally Turkey.

British leader David Cameron expressed his sadness at the loss of life.

Depression drugs help teens, too

Health officials say roughly one in 25 adolescents in the United States is taking antidepressants.

A new study from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is said to be the first to offer statistics on how many kids aged 12 to 17 take antidepressants.

It's based on surveys and depression screenings of about 12,000 Americans.

The study found about one in 10 adults takes antidepressants.

And perhaps more should — the researchers said only one third of people with depression symptoms in the study were actually taking medication.

The study also found that women take the drugs more than men, and whites use them more than blacks or Mexican-Americans.

No libel for website links: Supreme Court

B.C. court had dismissed the case Judge said hyperlinks like footnote or reference in newsletter

The Supreme Court of Canada has unanimously upheld a lower court's ruling that linking to a website containing libellous material does not in itself constitute libel.

The top court ruled yesterday against Wayne Crookes, a former Green party campaign manager who argued that posting links to sites with defamatory statements was the same as publishing the defamatory material.

The website in question did not reproduce any of the disputed material, nor did it comment on it.

The Supreme Court said there is a difference between simply linking to a website and actively encouraging someone to follow a link to a website with defamatory content.

"Only when a hyperlinker presents content from the hyperlinked material in a way that actually repeats the defamatory content, should that content be considered to be 'published' by the hyperlinker," the court wrote. "Such an approach promotes expression and respects the realities of the Internet, while creating little or no limitations to a plaintiff's ability to vindicate his or her reputation."

"The ruling is a huge win for the Internet," said Michael Geist, a University of Ottawa law professor. "The Supreme Court of Canada clearly understood the technology, I think they understand the Internet. They, most importantly in this case, understand the direct link — no pun intended — between hyperlinks on the Internet and freedom of expression and the ability to disseminate information."

Mass rallies in Greece erupt into violence

Dentists, doctors and lawyers join shop owners and dock workers in general strike yesterday Some 3,000 police deployed in central Athens

Hundreds of rioting youth smashed and looted stores in central Athens yesterday during an anti-government strike against painful new austerity measures.

Outside parliament, demonstrators hurled chunks of marble and gasoline bombs at riot police, who responded with tear gas and stun grenades. Police said at least 14 officers were hospitalized with injuries. At least three journalists covering the demonstrations sustained minor injuries.

The violence spread across the city centre, as at least 100,000 people marched through the Greek capital on the first day of a two-day general strike that unions described as the largest protest in years.

Police and rioters held running battles through the narrow streets, as thick black smoke billowed from burning garbage and bus stops.

The strike came before a parliamentary vote yesterday on new tax increases and spending cuts.

But citizens at the protest said they already are reeling from more than one-and-a-half years of austerity measures.

"We just can't take it any more. There is desperation, anger and bitterness," said Nikos Anastasopoulos, head of a workers' union for an Athens municipality.

Other municipal workers said they had no option but to take to the streets.

"We can't make ends meet for our families," said protester Eleni Voulieri. "We've lost our salaries, we've lost everything and we're in danger of losing our jobs."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"We have to explain to all these indignant people who see their lives changing that what the country is experiencing is not the worst stage of the crisis. It is an anguished and necessary effort to avoid the ultimate, deepest and harshest level of the crisis."

Greek MPs vote for austerity

A new austerity bill that will dig deep into Greek pockets has been granted initial approval.

Greek parliamentarians voted 154-141 in favour of the bill late yesterday. A second vote will be held today in the 300-seat Parliament, after which the bill will be passed into law.

The measures include new tax hikes, further pension and salary cuts, temporary layoffs of 30,000 public servants and the suspension of collective labour contracts.

Creditors have demanded the measures before they give Greece more funds from a bailout loan of $152.11 billion US from other eurozone countries and the International Monetary Fund. Greece says it will run out of money in mid-November without the $11-billion US instalment. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police ‘have come in and started a riot’: Traveller

U.K. police clash with protesters at illegal Travellers site east of London as evictions begin Vanessa Redgrave came to Dale Farm residents’ support

British police used sledgehammers, crowbars and a cherry picker yesterday to clear the way for the eviction of Irish Travellers from a site where they have lived illegally for a decade.

By the afternoon police said they were in control of the site, and that bailiffs were beginning to move onto the disputed property.

Essex Police said two protesters were Tasered and seven people arrested after police officers were attacked with rocks, other missiles and liquids including urine.

Residents and supporters, however, said police had used excessive force.

Evictions of Travellers, a traditionally nomadic group similar to, but ethnically distinct from, Gypsy or Roma people, are relatively common across Britain. But few are as large, or as high-profile, as yesterday’s at Dale Farm.

The police and bailiffs faced resistance from several dozen protesters who threw bricks and struggled with officers at the site, set in fields 50 kilometres east of London. One mobile home was set on fire as police moved in at dawn, and several protesters chained themselves to barricades with bicycle locks to slow down the evictions. Others scaled a 12-metre scaffolding tower.

Police moved protesters away and later used a cherry picker to reach the scaffolding platform and remove protesters who had chained themselves to the structure.

“I’ve been through a lot of evictions, but I’ve never seen anything like this ... they have come in and started a riot that we never wanted,” said resident Kathleen McCarthy, who accused police of roughing up Travellers at the site, injuring three women. “We are being dragged out of the only homes we have in this world.”

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

‘Ethnic cleansing’

- The conflict over Dale Farm has simmered since 2001, when Travellers bought and settled on a former scrap yard next to a legal Travellers’ site. The legal battle dragged on for years until the Travellers lost a final appeal last week.
- The local authority says it’s a simple planning issue — the 86 families lack permission to pitch homes on the land. The Travellers call it ethnic cleansing — the latest chapter in a centuries-old story of mistrust between nomads and British society.

▶ An Irish Traveller resident holds up a cross in front of a burning barricade during evictions at the Dale Farm Travellers site near Basildon, England, 50 kilometres east of London, yesterday.

FBI hoping social media helps case

Images posted on Twitter, Facebook aimed at reaching families of unknown victims of criminal

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is hoping that photographs of items, taken as evidence from a man convicted of sex torture, will help solve cold cases or at least identify their owners, spokesman Frank Fisher said yesterday.

The images were collected during a nearly 20-year-old case involving David Parker Ray, who was convicted of sexually torturing his victims but also boasted of killing others.

The photographs, which were recently posted on the FBI's website, will be tweeted and reposted on Facebook — tools that have helped solve other cold cases, Fisher said.

"We hope, however way it can happen, that these images do get to families and friends of loved ones who are missing," said Fisher. "We hope that they look at these images, and if they recognized any of them as belonging to their loved ones, that they call us as soon as possible."

Woman injured by herd of hungry pigs

State television in Macedonia says a 71-year-old woman has been hospitalized with serious injuries after being attacked by a herd of hungry pigs on her farm.

It said the woman from a village near the southern city of Bitola was being treated yesterday for a broken jaw, a broken left arm, and an injured shinbone.

State and private TV said the woman was attacked by about 50 pigs who had apparently not been fed for days when she went inside the pen to catch a piglet for slaughter.

British official steps down amid spy scandal

▶ Ekaterina Zatuliveter arrives for an immigration hearing in London yesterday.

26-year-old worked as lawmaker's research assistant for more than 2 years

The British lawmaker allegedly ensnared in a Russian intelligence operation announced yesterday that he was stepping down from the House of Commons' Defence Committee.

Ekaterina Zatuliveter, 26, is accused of using her position to pass sensitive information to Russian intelligence. She has not been charged with any crime, but the U.K. is seeking to expel her from the country on national security grounds.

On Tuesday, Zatuliveter said she carried out a lengthy affair with the 65-year-old married lawmaker but denied a lawyer's claim that she served as Russian intelligence's "eyes and ears in the Houses of Parliament."

Mike Hancock denies passing Zatuliveter any classified information but said he was stepping down from the committee so that it could "continue with its work unimpaired by current events." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.K. lobbyist scandal prompts rule changes

Swapping contact cards over canapes, cozy chats at lavish lunches — in the wake of a scandal over a defence minister who offered his friend access to overseas visits and meetings, Britain is tightening rules on those who seek to win influence over lawmakers.

Liam Fox stepped down as defence secretary on Friday amid scrutiny of the role of Adam Werritty, a close friend who had posed as an aide, arranged private meetings and held talks with foreign dignitaries on at least 18 trips overseas.

Werritty, a former defence lobbyist and the best man at Fox's 2005 wedding, had no official government position but was a constant presence at the minister's side — leaving some overseas governments convinced he was an aide.

The fact he was funded by a circle of businessmen, some of whom had ties to Sri Lanka or promoted links between Israel and Britain, has raised questions over what the public should know about those who mingle with ministers.

A government inquiry published Monday found Werritty was not employed as a lobbyist, and said that both he and Fox had insisted he had not used his access to advance his clients' interests.

But it also urged the government to press ahead with a planned register of lobbyists and said ministry aides must do more to keep a check on those seeking to influence ministers over contracts or policy.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No registration

- Unlike the United States, Britain does not currently have a mandatory register for lobbyists.
- However, the size of the influence peddling industry is worth an estimated 2 billion pounds ($3.2 billion US) — much smaller in scale than in the U.S.

Vietnam War bunker found

Historian says site under hotel should be opened to public

NA SON NGUYEN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Technicians of the Metropole Hotel in Hanoi climb up a Vietnam War underground bunker discovered beneath the bar in the hotel's garden.

NIHON DENPA NEWS, FILE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ In this July 1972 file photo, American actress and activist Jane Fonda is surrounded by soldiers and reporters as she sings an anti-war song near Hanoi during the Vietnam War.

The siren's wail at the historic Metropole Hotel sent American folk singer Joan Baez and other guests scampering across a garden and into an underground bunker. Even through 1.5 metres of concrete, they could still hear the roar of American bombs raining on parts of Hanoi.

Nearly four decades have passed since the so-called Christmas Bombings rocked parts of Vietnam's capital in December 1972. After the war ended three years later, the bunker was sealed and all but forgotten.

Its exact location remained a mystery until this summer, when a worker's drill pierced its concrete roof during renovations of a poolside bar.

Since then, workers have been excavating the flooded and low-ceilinged space. Not much has been found in the seven rooms: a wine bottle, a rusty paint can and a light bulb still in a socket. But a few tales remain, some involving famous guests.

"If these walls could talk, they would tell a lot of stories ... (The bomb shelter) needs to be brought back into the life of the hotel as a reminder of what this hotel and this town went through."
KAI SPETH, METROPOLE HOTEL GENERAL MANAGER

The North Vietnamese government used the French colonial-era hotel, a stately four-storey building in the shadow of Hanoi's Opera House, to house foreign guests during the war.

Nguyen Thi Xuan Phuong, now 82, remembers staying in the bunker during the Christmas Bombings with anti-war activist Baez. On one of the 12 nights that B-52s pounded areas around the city, the lights went out, prompting a few foreigners to scream in the darkness.

"Can you sing a song?" Phuong asked the young singer. "We may not change the situation, but your songs may help calm people down." When Baez's voice rang out as someone plucked a guitar, the bunker was revitalized, Phuong recalls.

Others who sheltered there included war correspondents and American actress Jane Fonda, says Phuong, who worked for the government as a doctor assisting foreign guests.

Fonda's visit to enemy territory ignited fury at home. She criticized U.S. policy on North Vietnamese radio and earned the nickname "Hanoi Jane" after posing for a photo atop an anti-aircraft gun — an incident Fonda later said she regretted.

French entrepreneurs opened the Metropole in 1901, calling it "the largest and best appointed hotel in Indo-China."

Over the years, it welcomed celebrities from Charlie Chaplin — who came in 1936 on his honeymoon — to Graham Greene, who wrote parts of his famous novel, The Quiet American, at the hotel.

The Metropole was renamed the Thong Nhat (Reunification) Hotel after Vietnam gained its independence from France in 1954. But after communist forces won the Vietnam War in 1975, the hotel languished under state management as a reunified Vietnam struggled to recover from fighting that killed some 58,000 Americans and an estimated three million Vietnamese.

It wasn't until the early 1990s, after a French company assumed partial ownership, that the Metropole regained its earlier name and its place as one of the city's spots to see and be seen.

Discovery of the nearly 50-square-metre bunker with its mildewed, mustard-coloured walls raises questions about how it will be preserved and who will be allowed to visit.

Ohio police shoot freed zoo animals

Game preserve had Bengal tigers, lions, cheetahs, wolves, giraffes, camels and grizzly bears Cages opened, farm's fences left unsecured

Sheriff's deputies shot nearly 50 wild animals — including 18 rare Bengal tigers and 17 lions — in a big-game hunt yesterday after the owner of an exotic-animal park threw open their cages and committed suicide in what may have been a last act of spite against neighbours.

As homeowners nervously hid indoors, officers armed with high-powered rifles and shoot-to-kill orders fanned out through fields and woods to hunt down about 56 animals that had been set loose from the Muskingum County Animal Farm by its owner, Terry Thompson, before he shot himself to death Tuesday.

After an all-night hunt that extended into yesterday afternoon, 48 animals were killed. Six others — three leopards, a grizzly bear and two monkeys — were captured and taken to the Columbus Zoo. A wolf was later found dead, leaving a monkey as the only animal still on the loose.

Those destroyed included six black bears, two grizzlies, a baboon and three mountain lions.

Jack Hanna, TV personality and former director of the Columbus Zoo, defended the sheriff's decision to kill the animals, but said the deaths of the Bengal tigers were especially tragic. There are only about 1,400 left in the world, he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Apple geniuses mourn

Outlets closed for hours so employees could watch memorial service

Apple Inc.'s famous penchant for secrecy remained intact yesterday as the company's retail stores were curtained and employees were close-lipped about a private memorial service to celebrate the life of co-founder Steve Jobs.

The service, announced to Apple employees in an email by CEO Tim Cook, took place yesterday morning at company headquarters in Cupertino, Calif. It was also webcast to employees worldwide.

At stores across Northern California, white curtains were draped across the windows to block the view from outside.

Near the campus before services started, sheriff's deputies directed traffic and employees streamed toward the company's outdoor amphitheatre. Media handlers kept reporters from getting too close.

MARY ALTAFFER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Customers wait outside a closed Apple store in New York yesterday as employees inside watched a live webcast of a private memorial service for Apple's late co-founder Steve Jobs.

Music drifted across the campus from the service, and employees leaving the service who wouldn't give their names said singer Norah Jones and the British rock band Coldplay performed live. At the end of the service, employees said Coldplay front man Chris Martin told everyone to get back to work because that's what Steve Jobs would have wanted.

The mood at the service was festive, not sombre, employees said. Speakers reportedly included former U.S. vice-president Al Gore, who reminisced about his experiences with Steve Jobs and Apple.

Kobo kindles tablet fire

The Vox comes with 3 colour books, 12 magazines and 7 newspapers

The Canadian ebook company Kobo is getting into the crowded tablet market and beating a major competitor to the punch.

Orders are now being taken for the Kobo Vox, a full-colour seven-inch tablet about the same size as the BlackBerry PlayBook. It's selling for about $200. Shipping starts on Oct. 28.

It's a Wi-Fi–only device, runs on the Google Android operating system and has eight gigabytes of built-in storage, with the ability to add up to 32GB more with an SD card.

The Vox will compete against a long list of tablets, including Apple's iPads, the PlayBook, Samsung's Galaxy Tabs and Motorola's Xoom. But the Vox is about 60 per cent cheaper than the iPad.

Kobo's largest ebook competitor, Amazon, also announced its own tablet recently with similar specifications. Called the Fire, it's not due for release until Nov. 15 and is also selling for $199 in the U.S.

Transat lays off workers

Tour operator Transat A.T. expects to save $10 million a year with the elimination of 143 non-union positions in Quebec and across the country, including 115 layoffs.

Transat staff were informed of the layoffs on Tuesday.

The Montreal-based company says the positions included vice-presidents, senior directors, supervisors and administrative personnel.

No flight attendants have been let go.

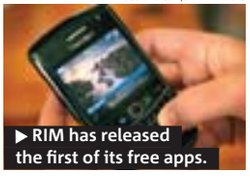
RIM gives out first of 'mea culpa' apps

SCOTT OLSON/GETTY IMAGES



▶ RIM has released the first of its free apps.

Research In Motion has released the first of a number of free BlackBerry apps intended to compensate its users for a widespread service outage last week.

The iSpeech DriveSafe.ly Pro was available for download on the BlackBerry app store as of yesterday morning.

The app reads text and email messages aloud for motorists and was initially sold on the store for $19.99 US.

RIM says it will offer at least a dozen free apps, valued at more than $100, to its users after widespread outages knocked email, texting and Internet services offline last week.

Over the next few weeks, RIM said it will release a variety of other apps, including versions of popular mobile phone games like the Sims, Bejeweled, Texas Hold 'em Poker and Bubble Bash.

The apps will be made available on BlackBerry App World and will be offered for free until Dec. 31.

Auto-centric store

Canadian Tire has unveiled its first automotive-centric store as part of a strategy to refocus on the products that helped make it a household name.

The new store, in Bowmanville, Ont., will draw attention to its auto parts and accessories. Canadian Tire is attempting to overcome sluggish retail sales after spending years trying to brand itself as a general goods retailer.

The retailer hopes to grow the auto division by four to six per cent by 2015 and regain its reputation as a national authority on all things automotive.

▶ A Facebook scam promising users a free Tim Hortons gift card was taken down by the social network behemoth.

Coffee scam jolts java lovers

Coffee lovers across North America beware: If someone offers you a free cup of java on Facebook, it's probably too good to be true.

A scam popped up on Facebook over the weekend promising users a free Tim Hortons gift card if they liked a page and shared it with their friends. Users were then asked to provide their email address and other sensitive personal information.

The scam branched out to Starbucks fans, with a page purportedly offering free gift cards to celebrate the Seattle coffee giant's 40th anniversary.

Thousands of people shared the pages before they were removed by Facebook. Free voucher scams are a standard formula for fraudsters gunning for people's personal information.

The scam also spread via email, with some version of the Tim Hortons scam offering $25 gift cards, supposedly to celebrate the chain's 25th anniversary. Tim Hortons was founded in 1964, making it 47 years old.

The Timmies scam also asked users to write a note of thanks on the page's wall. The suggested phrase includes a valiant yet failed attempt at Canadian spelling: "Free Coffee and Donughts, Thanks."

Maple Leaf to close plants, cut jobs

Toronto-based processed meats maker says changes are part of three-year $560-million restructuring plan

RYAN REMIORZ/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Michael McCain, president and CEO of Maple Leaf Foods.

Maple Leaf Foods is cutting 1,550 jobs, closing plants in four provinces and streamlining distribution.

The Toronto-based maker of processed meats and other foods will close processing plants in Kitchener, Hamilton and Toronto in Ontario; in North Battleford, Sask.; Moncton, N.B. and a small plant in Winnipeg by the end of 2014.

The company said the plan will create 1,150 new jobs but the associated plant closures will more than offset that, resulting in a net loss of 1,550 positions from among its 21,000 employees.

Maple Leaf said it will build a new prepared-meats plant in Hamilton, and will also invest in plants in Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Brampton.

The company will also close distribution centres in Moncton, N.B., Burlington, Ont., Kitchener, Ont., and Coquitlam, B.C. — consolidating distribution for Eastern Canada in a new facility in Ontario.

Taking advantage of parking permits, published Oct.19

You are correct in your assessment of the cost to the cash-strapped city of Toronto of 'accessibility permits' being used fraudulently on a daily basis in Toronto.

Just one example: On any given day on the north side of Danforth Avenue between Coxwell and Woodbine, at least a dozen parked vehicles can be counted with these 'blue permits' visible on the dash. Some are SUVs and new pickup trucks. Undoubtedly some are legitimate, but seen emerging from and entering these vehicles are able-bodied men without canes, crutches or wheelchairs on their way to and from coffee-shops and other businesses.

Additionally there would appear to be no time limit for 'permit' parking, eliminating space for paying customers. If 'permit' parking here is multiplied by all the other neighbourhoods in the city then this represents a staggering loss of revenue to Toronto.

▶ Zeus, a Maine Coon cat, encounters a mountain lion in Boulder, Colo.

Gail Loveman's 11-year-old cat named Zeus usually stands tall and hisses when he sees a squirrel outside his owner's home. He wasn't as much of a tough guy when the animal on the other side of the glass was a mountain lion.

Loveman tells The Denver Post the encounter lasted five minutes before the mountain lion wandered off from her house near Boulder, Colo.

Loveman says she was in her home office last Thursday when she heard a noise and turned to see the mountain lion on the porch.

Zeus entered the room and walked to the sliding glass door for a closer look while Loveman snapped photos.

Loveman went upstairs and spotted a second mountain lion. She says both jumped a fence and left.

At odds with modernity

Bharati: The Wonder that is India starts Oct. 26 at the Sony Centre for Performing Arts
The musical, written for foreign audiences, is an insight into culture and community

BACKSTAGE PASS

IAN GORMELY
METRO TORONTO

It's rare that an actress leaves a burgeoning film career for the theatre and even rarer in a country like India, where Bollywood and film reign supreme. Yet that's exactly what Bhavna Pani did nine years ago.

"For me, the high of being a performer is being on stage," she says, "the knot in your stomach, the elephant size butterflies."

Her decision yielded some impressive results when she was cast as the lead in Bharati, which premiers in Toronto next week. Described as "a film on stage," the titular main character has to choose between the man she's fallen in love with and the approval of her father. The story is also a metaphor for India, says Pani, with her lover representing modernity at odds with the traditionalism of her father.

The musical was written with foreign audiences in mind and synthesizes the myriad cultures of India onto the stage. "You get information, and insight into the culture," says Pani. "With a lot of singing and dancing in between and a happy ending."

Pani was the first person cast for the production six years ago when it started making its way across Europe, with Pani performing to 5,000 people a night six to eight months out of the year.

There are 16 dance numbers in the production and Pani is involved in 13 and a half of them. And unlike a Bollywood film, there's not director yelling "cut" if someone screws up. "Even my number of breaths between one song and another is calculated."

But its that rush of energy that she has to channel to the audience night after night that keeps things interesting. "You know its do or die with no retakes. That's the challenge as a performer."

Bharati: the Wonder that is India plays from Oct 26 to Nov 6 at the Sony Centre of the Performing Arts, 1 Front St. East; $55.75 to $107.50.

CHRISTOPHE MOURTHÉ

▶ Bharati: the Wonder that is India opens on Oct. 26.

Audience

Not like North America

Who are they? Unlike North America, where stage and screen more or less share stature amongst both actors and audience, theatre is basically out of reach to most of India. "It's the crème de la crème who go watch theatre," says Pani, relegating it to a small niche in the Bollywood crazy country.

Rowan Atkinson reprises role as bumbling MI5 agent Johnny English

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD

HANDOUT

▶ Rowan Atkinson likens — but just a bit — Johnny English to the sillier James Bond movies from a decade ago.

Rowan Atkinson, the venerable British comic actor, is known as much for his bumbling, near-silent Mr. Bean as he is for the witheringly sarcastic Black Adder. He returns to cinemas this year with another of his characters, the blundering, very un-Bond-like British spy Johnny English. Bolstered by a surprising second life on DVD for the first film as well as Daniel Craig's revitalization of the franchise it mocks, Atkinson is hoping his spy has staying power. And if overseas box office receipts are any indication, it does.

The film has already had some impressive success around the world.

Yes, thank you. When you hear you're the No. 1 movie in Malaysia and Hong Kong and Indonesia and all these other places you think, Well that's curious. You know, these cultures about which I know absolutely nothing. Isn't it interesting that they can latch onto something like Johnny English Reborn and embrace it with as much enthusiasm as a British person would? Or Russia. I went to Moscow for a premiere there. That was fascinating — partly in fact from watching myself dubbed into Russian. I thought I sounded slightly effeminate, but maybe that's how they see the British. It's probably some kind of Russian subtext. "Make sure the Brit looks a bit effete."

Given the success of Mr. Bean and Johnny English, do you find people expect you to be a bit more dimwitted in real life?

Dimwitted? I'm not aware of that (laughs). Maybe I disappoint them — either by not being dimwitted enough or being more dimwitted than they thought I was going to be. Sometimes you get a sense of expectation of comedy, of a comic persona. When they discover that you're not Mr. Bean or anything like him, or even quite different — I hope — from Johnny English, as long as you can be polite and engaging, they might excuse you.

Where did the idea of revisiting Johnny English come from?

When the first Johnny English movie came out, people thought it was a bit cheap and cheerful. A "yeah, OK, three good jokes but then what?" sort of thing. And then it rather bizarrely established this reputation as a kind of DVD movie that children in particular can watch over and over and over again. The second re-exploitation, as they say; the TV screenings and the DVD sales. And that's where Johnny English did surprisingly well. And I guess that was a lot of the justification for making a sequel, from a commercial point of view.

And Bond has been having a resurgence.

Yes, exactly. What's good, actually, about the Daniel Craig thing is not only is he good in the part but because they decided — I'm sure, quite rightly — to move it into a more serious vein, it kind of opened up the field a bit for us. Johnny English Reborn is probably a little more — although only a little — like a James Bond movie of 10 or 15 years ago, when you had more fun with it and more silly jokes.

Getting chaired

One of the biggest laughs in Johnny English Reborn is also one of the simplest. During a tense briefing with the prime minister, Atkinson fails to control the raising and lowering of his office chair.

"There are a number of things at play there," Atkinson says. "One is the simple contrast, really, between a very serious meeting between the prime minister and his intelligence advisors — including Johnny English — and the ludicrous ineptitude of someone who's not controlling their pneumatic chair. And yet no one seems to stop the meeting and say, 'Would you stop playing with that chair!'"

Monster director takes on Thor 2

HANDOUT

▶ Thor 2 will be the first major superhero movie to be directed by a woman.

Hollywood has signed up its first female director for a major superhero movie.

Marvel Studios announced Thursday that Patty Jenkins will direct Thor 2, the sequel to last summer's hit that is due in theatres Nov. 15, 2013.

Jenkins is best-known for writing and directing 2003's Monster, which earned Charlize Theron the best-actress Academy Award. Her credits also include episodes of Entourage and Arrested Development.

Chris Hemsworth will reprise his title role in Thor 2 as the Norse god of thunder, with co-stars Natalie Portman and Tom Hiddleston also returning.

The first Thor, directed by Kenneth Branagh, took in $448 million worldwide.

Another female filmmaker, Lexi Alexander, made the lower-budgeted Marvel movie The Punisher: War Zone in 2008. But Jenkins is the first woman to direct a blockbuster superhero franchise.

Clooney ponders politics — as a film

Actor brings Hollywood glamour and Ides of March tale of political intrigue he directed to London Film Fest

JONATHAN SHORT/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ The waxwork of U.S. actor and director George Clooney is posed within the replica Oval Office at Maddame Tussauds in London on Tuesday. Clooney plays a presidential candidate in his latest film, The Ides of March.

George Clooney says Hollywood can be a ruthless place — but it's nothing compared to the world of politics.

The star, who plays a U.S. presidential hopeful in The Ides of March, said yesterday that "there's a certain cutthroat element to the business" of moviemaking, but added that actors share a spirit of generosity that he doesn't often see in politics.

Most performers "are pretty kind to one another," Clooney told reporters ahead of a gala screening of the movie at the London Film Festival.

"Because you're so lucky if you get to the position where you get to be in a film," Clooney said. "You're very privileged, and you understand that it's not just your brilliance that got you there, that you're standing on the shoulders of a lot of happy accidents along the way."

Clooney directed, co-wrote, produced and stars in the tale of a Democratic presidential contender, with Ryan Gosling as an idealistic aide swept up in a sex scandal in the final days of a closely fought primary campaign. The film also stars Philip Seymour Hoffman and Paul Giamatti as rival campaign managers, and Evan Rachel Wood as an ambitious intern.

Clooney said the movie, adapted from a play by Beau Willimon, is "a pretty cynical look at politics." He has said he held off filming it amid the wave of optimism that accompanied the 2008 election of President Barack Obama. Three years later, amid political division and economic gloom, that positive mood is long gone.

"I think that the 'hope' part of the hope message has been tamped down a bit," Clooney said.

"It's all cyclical," he added. "It'll change back again. I feel fairly optimistic about the way our country works."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No saint George

Clooney, whose own private life is the subject of constant scrutiny, said he's not tempted to step into the even more unforgiving world of politics.

▶ "Hollywood is a bit more forgiving," Clooney said, "because they don't expect us to be saints."

Bette Midler selling off iconic items to benefit her charity Admits that she couldn't part with all her dresses

It wasn't long ago that Bette Midler blasted Lady Gaga on Twitter for appearing in a costume that was similar to Midler's famous mermaid-in-a-wheelchair get-up. Now the Divine Miss M is extending an olive branch by suggesting Gaga buy some of her originals.

"I think she should go for a real wheelchair and a real fishtail because these are really beautiful. They are decorated and hand-beaded," Midler said in an interview Tuesday. "If she is interested, she can have whatever she wants because she is a very talented girl and I love her a lot."

Gaga and the rest of the world will soon be able to bid on that costume and more, as Midler is selling some of her most iconic outfits through Julien's Auctions in Beverly Hills, Calif., on Nov. 12, with some of the proceeds benefiting her charity, the New York Restoration Project.

Was it crazy to go through and look at all of those costumes, sizes and styles?

It was my weight. It was my height. It was the fashion. It was what colour my hair was. It was who I was living with, or who I was in love with. It is very, very moving, but it is also time to spin that stuff out into the world. You get to a certain point in life and you say, 'Do I really want my daughter to have to deal with this when I am gone?' It is just so massive and you don't. You really don't. You want people to have the joy of it while you are still alive.

What are some of the items that you could not part with?

The dress that I wore to the red carpet for the opening of The Rose. I kept that back. That was the dress that made me cry because it was such a wonderful time in my life and I was surrounded by friends and I was so thin.

You are selling the iconic mermaid costume?

Not just one. Some of my best ones are up for auction, and some of my chorus girls are up for auction, and I am waiting for Gaga to get in there and grab hers. Some of the wheelchairs are up for auction. I mean, there is a selection from everything.

Questions

A few more questions for Midler

- What if Gaga buys your entire collection? I would be thrilled. I hope she buys at least a little bit. It would be fun. There are so many wonderful ideas and so much of it. So much of it is so funny.
- Do you look back on some of this and think, I can't believe I wore that? You can say I can't believe I dressed up as a fish. You can say that. You can say I can't believe I came out in a pair of knickers that were up to my neck. I can't believe I wore a pair of pants up to my neck. You can say that about practically everything. But, I remember it all so fondly. It was a great ride. Just the best ride, just the most fun.
- How did you decide what to auction? Some of the stuff is so well known and iconic, they kind of cherry-picked what they thought was the stuff that the fans and interested parties would respond to the most, and that is what they chose.

Knock knock knocking on opportunity's door

Former Guns N' Roses bassist Duff McKagan is not your average rock star/recovering drug addict

JOHN CARUCCI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Duff McKagan writes for ESPN.com, owns a wealth management company and recently penned a book.

In the years since Duff McKagan left Guns N' Roses and Velvet Revolver behind, he has emerged as something of a renaissance man. He writes about sports for ESPN.com, has his own wealth management company, Meridian Rock, for musicians, and now is an author with the book, It's So Easy (and Other Lies). And he still rocks out with his group Loaded.

The book takes its name from a Guns N' Roses song, and details McKagan's triumphs and struggles. The Seattle-born rocker rose to fame in the late 1980s with Guns N' Roses, but would eventually become addicted to drugs and alcohol, until an epiphany one day changed McKagan's life.

The title of the book is It's So Easy, and yet it hasn't been so easy. What made it hard?

The band started to take off, and moving to L.A. was great. But I suffered panic attacks, young. And I found that drinking would dampen down the panic attacks. And I always thought to myself, 'When I get up some free time, I'll deal with this,' but as the band started to take off more and more, I got the panic attacks greater and greater, and I was drinking more and more. And then I found drugs; cocaine. I could drink more if I did cocaine, but cocaine would give me more panic attacks, and it would be this caustic kind of stew of action and reaction.

What made you change?

I found reason in the hospital. My mom — I'm the last of eight kids — had Parkinson's (disease) at the time. She came to the hospital, and she was suffering Parkinson's shakes and she was in a wheelchair. I'm the youngest son. I realized then and there that order of things was wrong. I was supposed to be taking care of her.

You have said that kickboxing turned your life around. How did that happen?

I looked like hell and there were boils coming out of my skin from drugs like leaving my body and this trainer said, 'There's somebody I want you to meet,' and they took me to this dojo ... He introduced me to sensei (teacher) Benny, and I could tell right away that he could see right through me, down inside of me and knew instantly.

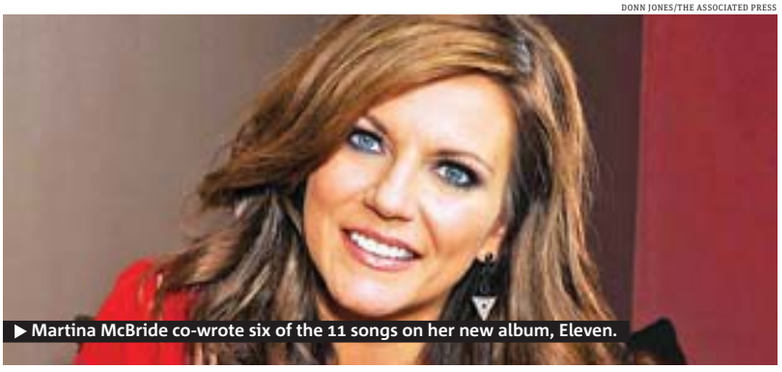
McBride gets makeover

Country star switches label, tackles writing her own songs

DONN JONES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ Martina McBride co-wrote six of the 11 songs on her new album, Eleven.

Martina McBride was looking for that spark you get when you know you've discovered your true match. The country music star found it in Scott Borchetta and his Big Machine Label Group.

McBride's new album, Eleven, is her first for Republic Nashville, ending a two-decade association with RCA that included 18 million in album sales. But at 45, she finds the switch invigorating, and it has pushed her in directions she never really considered before.

Those days with RCA, she says, were good ones and the split was amicable.

"But it's also good after that long being in one place, to be able to transition to a place that has people that are just super, super excited about you," McBride said. "Sometimes in a long relationship, there comes a time when you just need to shake it up a little bit, and this feels like the first days when I was at RCA. Everything feels brand new again, and that's really a great thing, especially this far into a career."

Borchetta was very interested when he learned McBride wanted to talk about joining his group, home to other tops stars like Taylor Swift, Reba McEntire and Rascal Flatts. And why not? She's one of country's veterans and remains one of its most lauded singers. She's up for female vocalist of the year next month at the Country Music Association Awards again, seeking a record fifth win in the category.

The label head thought there was more to McBride than the public generally sees, though. He encouraged her to write more songs for Eleven than she had on any of her previous 10 albums, and he also thought she should get out of town while recording.

McBride, who also hired new management and brought in new co-producer Byron Gallimore during this period, found the label's support liberating. It reinforced her growing confidence to tackle intimidating things like songwriting.

She co-wrote six of the 11 tracks. There was the lead single Teenage Daughters that arose from a disagreement with her oldest daughter. Long Distance Lullaby, about being away from home, also grew out of an idea about three daughters. And then there's Always Be This Way, loosely inspired by Train's Hey, Soul Sister and Jason Mraz's I'm Yours, which she wrote because she "just wanted to write something fun. I don't think I've ever made a record that had so much of my attention, especially since I had children," McBride said.

Idol runner-up debuts album

Lauren Alaina to 'make it or break it' with record released last week

Lauren Alaina is growing up quickly.

The 16-year-old American Idol runner-up has spent the past four months since the show's season finale performing in arenas across the country, doing interviews, music video and photo shoots, and recording her debut album, Wildflower, released last week.

The former high school cheerleader is hoping the effort will help solidify her in the country music world, because she realizes the stakes are high.

"I feel like this first album is kind of make-it-or-break-it for me, because I just got off national television. So people know who I am, but they don't know who I am as an artist," said Lauren in a recent interview. "I just feel like this album is my way of kind of putting myself out there and showing them exactly who I am."

Billboard's associate director of charts, Keith Caulfield, believes Lauren is off to a good start. Her first single, Like My Mother Does, is in the top 40.

"Even though she has Idol as this great platform to launch her, she's still a developing artist. You usually don't see Idol winners with their first single on the country charts fly to No. 1," he said.

"I think both her and (winner) Scotty (McCreery) are both in a really good position right now, because they're both young and they're both singing country music," he added, noting that the success of Taylor Swift has opened doors for young performers in the genre.

The 12 songs Lauren chose for Wildflower reveal experiences she's gone through or stories she relates to on a personal level. She co-wrote one track, called Funny Thing About Love, with Nashville songwriting talents Luke Laird and Brett James.

Lauren cut a song Carrie Underwood co-wrote, called Eighteen Inches. As a former American Idol" winner, Underwood has provided meaningful support to Lauren. The two exchanged phone numbers, and Lauren asks her for advice when she gets upset. Recently, the Georgia native was feeling particularly homesick and reached out to Underwood.

"I just said, 'How do you deal with being away from your family for so long and just being gone all the time?' And she said, 'You have to think about all the positive stuff that's going on, because you have so much going for you right now. Your family will always be there.' Just hearing that from her, knowing that she had been through what I'm going through, just made me feel 10 times better," said Lauren.

▶ T.I. — the so called King of South — has bounced back after being incarcerated by co-writing a novel, Power & Beauty, and continuing to film his TV show Family Hustle.

T.I. gets remade

Rapper aims to have positive influence on troubled teens

Spending most of the last two years behind bars usually disqualifies someone from labeling themselves a role model.

But T.I. — back in the limelight after his latest release from confinement — insists that he's still the voice to help shape the youth for good, perhaps even more so after his well-documented struggles.

"I understand if you have your reservations of my history or my criminal record. But my question to you is, 'Who do you have that has a clean record, a clean image, never did drugs, never toted a gun? Who else do you have that can speak to these kids and they'll listen to them? If not me, who?" he said during a recent interview.

"I was actually making progress. I was doing good. I was touching lives and making a difference."

T.I. is hoping to pick up where he left off, both with his community service and his career. He was released from a halfway house last month following an 11-month stint in a prison in Arkansas. He landed there after he was caught with drugs in California, just a few months after almost a year of incarceration for trying to buy automatic weapons and silencers.

Civil rights leader Andrew Young, who has been a mentor to T.I., said despite the rapper's rap sheet, he has the potential to positively influence this hip-hop driven generation in a similar way that Martin Luther King Jr. did during the civil rights movement.

"He's always trying to keep peace," Young said of T.I. "He does not cause trouble. He's been a victim of trouble. He's done some stupid things like buying guns. ... But that's the challenge of life. How do you live a smart and creative life without getting suckered?"

A fabulous party drink

Only the hippest of Toronto hosts would have the now popular Sangria, chilled and ready in pitchers for their guests to enjoy.

Sangria is a wine punch typical of Argentina, Uruguay, Spain and Portugal. It normally consists of a wine, chopped fruit, a sweetener, and a small amount of added brandy.

If you're planning to have a party or a girls night in, then keep this Fabulous Party Sangria recipe on hand and ready to mix. Your guests will love it's delicious fruity taste, and are bound to find several delicious fruit slices bobbing around in their glass.

PREPARATION

In a sangria pitcher, combine all ingredients except the strawberries and soda.

Chill in the refrigerator overnight. Immediately before serving, stir the strawberries and lemon-lime soda. Pour into chilled glasses and serve.

This sangria is also specially attractive served in a wine glass with an orange slice garnishing the rim.

Fabulous Party Sangria

INGREDIENTS

- 3 1/4 cups (26 fl. oz) dry red wine
- 1/3 cup (3 oz) sugar
- 1/3 cup brandy
- 1/3 cup Cointreau
- 1/3 lemon-flavored vodka
- 1 small lemon, sliced crosswise
- 1 small orange, sliced crosswise
- 1 small lime, sliced crosswise
- 1 medium pear, diced
- 2 medium peach, peeled, pitted and sliced
- 2 cups (8 oz) sliced strawberries
- 1 bottle carbonated lemon-lime soda

Dee on marking tests

- "Just because I knew the question didn't mean I knew the answer, so I would just mark the smartest kid in my class ... I'd mark his first and that would become my answer sheet.

HANDOUT

▶ As a teacher, Gerry Dee was afraid of teaching smart kids, because he wasn't able to answer their questions.

School's out for Gerry Dee

Comedian pulls plenty of material from his stint as a teacher

Canadian comedian Gerry Dee has a big year ahead of him, with his own sitcom set to launch on CBC-TV in January, as well as a cross-Canada tour and a planned DVD and book release.

While the former contestant of NBC's Last Comic Standing has plenty to boast about when it comes to his comedy career these days, there was a time when he was shy about his standup, he says, noting it was during his days as a high school teacher in Toronto.

"That was a real secretive thing at first," Dee, 42, said in a recent phone interview from his Toronto home, where he lives with his wife and two young children.

"I'm a fairly clean comic now; I was squeaky clean when I started because I would be so afraid that kids would show up, or parents. And I was teaching at a really reputable, private Catholic school."

Dee, who was born Gerard Donoghue, riffs on that part of his life in his current Life After Teaching Canadian tour and new DVD of the same name, which is slated for release in January.

He's also writing a book about his days in the classroom, with the working title Teaching: It's Harder Than It Looks and a release date of next October.

Dee's teaching days are also the basis of his sitcom, Mr. D, which is set to premiere Jan. 9 (at 8 p.m. ET) on CBC.

Filmed in July and August in Halifax, the 12-episode series sees Dee playing an exaggerated version of himself as a teacher, a career he held down for a decade until 2003.

Co-stars include Jonathan Torrens (Jonovision, Trailer Park Boys), Wes Williams (a.k.a. rapper Maestro), Mark Little of Pinicface, and Gemini Award winners Booth Savage and Bette MacDonald.

"It's primarily about my character, who is teaching subjects that he doesn't know, and is just trying to get through the day and pretend he knows and be (the students') buddy and be their friend," says Dee.

Probation breach lands Lohan in cuffs

Star taken into custody after judge finds her in violation of probation
Bail set at $100,000

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

▶ Lindsay Lohan

Lindsay Lohan has been taken away in handcuffs after a judge found her in violation of her probation.

Superior Court Judge Stephanie Sautner revoked Lohan's probation Wednesday after the actress encountered problems during her community service assignment at a women's shelter. Bail has been set at $100,000.

Sautner said Lohan would be entitled to a hearing before being sentenced to jail over the violation.

Lohan has started serving hours with the American Red Cross, but Sautner said that would not count toward her probation because it was not part of her sentence.

It's the latest legal problem for the 25-year-old Lohan, who remains on probation for a 2007 drunken driving case and a misdemeanour theft case this year. METRO

She's got style in the bag

As Tiffany & Co. launches their new leather collection in Canada, designers Richard Lambertson and John Truex dish on what's involved in making a luxury handbag Some items in the collection go for as much as $21,200!

HEATHER BUCHAN
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Materials account for much of the cost, given that all the bags and wallets have leather exteriors and interiors. "With a lot of 'luxury' brands, you open up a bag and it's empty. It's fabric-lined with a zip pocket," says Truex.

The pair's designs were sent to craftsmen in Italy where the entire collection was made.

The star item has been this Tiffany Reversible Tote — a soft suede and metallic leather bag with palladium-plated solid brass hardware and a detachable zipper pouch.

All seams are double-stitched

Corners are riveted for protection

The designers travelled extensively to derive inspiration for their collection's rich saturated colours.

"Bags are very personal. A bag has to be functional and appropriate for the person who's carrying it."
DESIGNER RICHARD LAMBERTSON

Every item in the collection includes the iconic Tiffany shade of blue. The interiors of some of the purses are lined in the signature blue leather, while the reversible tote bears the slightest accent of the shade on the enamel of the hardware.

Bag mistake

What do the designers deem the biggest mistake a woman can make when choosing a purse?

"Women lug around too many things that are unnecessary," says Lambertson.

"A mistake is wearing a huge tote when you're wearing a formal dress at a wedding," adds Truex. "It's like, come on! The bag is entering the room before you are. Check the bag at the door. I don't really like when accessories enter the room before the woman does."

How do I get rid of puffy morning eyes?

1. "Chamomile tea bags work miracles to reduce swelling," says Schlip, who works with Christina Applegate. Soak them, chill in the freezer then place on closed eyes for about 10 minutes.

The style bomb

Rev your personal style up a notch with this season's trendiest trend — the bomber jacket

RICHARD PECKETT
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

The bomber. It's an aggressive name that's probably got you picturing alpha male types like fighter pilots, punks or most likely Ryan Gosling in the high-octane thriller Drive.

The best thing — and this is rare in our metrosexual world — is that this jacket is for blokes, as in men who don't necessarily moisturize or know that Chanel isn't pronounced "channel."

Yes, the belching man's man is back. And leading the latest fashion sting is Gosling wearing a scorpion-embroidered bomber, in a souped-up getaway car with a hot girl by his side.

ATTITUDE JAY MANUEL

CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Clad in fedoras, headscarves and oversized glasses, models walking the runway for Attitude Jay Manuel were the picture of globetrotting cool in the spring-summer line from the Sears private label collection.

It was the second collection with creative director Jay Manuel of America's Next Top Model fame at the helm. And the new line delivered a taste of urban safari-inspired chic for the jet-setting fashionista, along with several garments that could easily be incorporated into everyday wear closer to home.

CHLOE COMME PARRIS

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chloe and Parris Gordon brought their own taste artistry to the makeshift canvas catwalk with the latest looks from their fashion and jewelry brand steeped in a colour palette of navy, cream, olive and yellow.

The sisters unveiled a sleek succession of monochromatic knits and richly-printed separates adorned with their brassy customized buttons, buckles, findings and zipper ends.

The line was a study in contrasts, with tailored suit jackets alongside garments boasting more fluid silhouettes.

JOEFFER CAOC

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Joeffer Caoc brought his penchant for glam to the playing field with an athletic-inspired range of designs at Toronto's LG Fashion Week.

Past collections from the womenswear designer have largely focused on his sleek evening looks befitting a night on the town. Yet Caoc opted to embrace a decidedly more casual esthetic in his spring-summer 2012 line.

Stylish sportswear-tinged touches were present in the creations, which incorporated bright orange and fuchsia alongside powdery pastels on a base of creamy white and neutral hues.

NEW HOME SALES IN GTA REMAIN STRONG

ROOFTOP SURFING

PAUL GOLINI JR.
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

As a home builder in the GTA, I have often looked to BILD to keep me up to date on all the happenings of the new home market, so you can imagine my excitement when I was asked to provide Metro readers with the latest sales statistics for the month of September.

It's been quite the run for the new homes market this year, particularly in the highrise market, but despite all the negative speculation, the demand for condos is still high. High enough, in fact, that the 2,652 highrise condos sold this September clock in as the best September on record!

On a year-to-date basis, total new home sales in the GTA are running 28 per cent ahead of January-September 2010, driven by a 44 per cent surge in new condominium unit sales which breaks another record for the highrise market. The low-rise sector is also on the rise, running nine per cent ahead of last year through September.

Now I know about a month ago, we had an unexpected statistic come out, citing that for the first time ever, the 905 regions beat out the city of Toronto in the amount of highrise sales recorded in one month.

So August surprised me and I was really curious to see if this was a one-time thing or a new trend. When the September numbers hit my inbox, I knew I had to see what levels of activity we were getting outside the big city.

According to RealNet Canada Inc., the 416 accounted for 64 per cent of condos sold in the GTA, but only 46 per cent of total new home sales. This means there's still plenty of activity happening in the 905, most of it coming from York Region, where highrise sales have more than tripled in September and are up 145 per cent year-to-date when compared with 2010.

I look forward to seeing how these stats play out in the coming months, with interest rates predicted to remain low. As always you can count on BILD to keep you posted!

When the sky's not the limit

Condo maintenance fees often start out as a nice way to avoid shovelling your front walkway
So why do those fees suddenly skyrocket?

DUNCAN MCALLISTER
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Prospective condo buyers should know the skinny on maintenance fees.

One of the great allures of condo living is that your time is freed from the mundane chores required with owning a house.

Such favourite activities as snow removal, lawn care, plant watering, window cleaning and vacuuming are performed by condo staff so that you don't have to.

And needless to say, all this has to be paid for.

All condos, in addition to mortgage payments, will charge monthly maintenance fees to cover operational costs.

Also called common area expenses, the fees cover your share of the maintenance, upkeep and management of the building common areas.

The fees are calculated per square foot, so the bigger the condo, the higher the fees.

Up to half of the fees collected by the condo corporation will go towards utilities such as electricity, water and gas.

Another 10 per cent will be set aside in a reserve fund to cover large repairs such as roof replacement.

If the fees are quite high on an older building, it's likely that it may have undergone a major repair that depleted the reserve fund.

As buildings age, more things go wrong, so newer buildings tend to have lower fees than older buildings.

Expect maintenance fees to increase incrementally year over year.

It is by how much they increase, that you will want to keep an eye on.

Be weary of buying a condo because of its low fees.

Builders tend to set them artificially low during presales.

By the second and third year, condo boards will realize that they can't run the building for less than 50 cents per sq. ft., so your fees may double or triple unexpectedly.

If the fees go up that much, it may be time to move into a newer building with lower fees.

So what is a reasonable amount? Is between 50-60 cents per sq. ft. about average in Toronto? Is 70 to 80 cents too high?

Be weary of buying a condo because of its low fees. Builders tend to set them artificially low during presales. By the second and third year, condo boards will realize that they can't run the building for less than 50 cents per sq. ft., so your fees may double or triple unexpectedly.

You must take into consideration what the fees include: a 24-hour concierge and security will increase costs.

Some condos have lavish amenities to pay for and others have scant few.

Some condo fees include all utilities, cable and internet and some don't.

The reality is that maintenance fees at most condo buildings in Toronto, whether they are loaded with amenities or not, tend to settle around 50-60 cents per square foot.

DEATH AND TAXES ARE SIMPLY UNAVOIDABLE

LEGAL MATTERS

JEFFREY COWAN
HOME
@METRONEWS.CA

Q: I am unmarried and own two houses that I have willed to my two sisters individually. What are the taxes that should be considered if I pass away and the houses go to my sisters?

A: Although I don't profess to be an expert on taxes (you should consult an accountant for a definitive answer), you will need to consider the following taxes:

1. On the death of an individual who owns a property that is not their principal residence (only one of your houses can be a principal residence), there is a deemed disposition of the property and capital gains taxes are due on the increase in value from the date of purchase to the date of disposition.

This is only applicable to the one house and should be included when the estate accountant files taxes for the deceased.

2. If a property is left to an individual in a will, then once it is transferred to the estate it can subsequently be transferred to the beneficiary without land transfer tax because it is exempt for the purposes of administering an estate.

3. The third tax that must be considered is estate administration tax (also known as probate fees).

The estate must be valued which will consider the value of both properties and a tax will be due and payable before anything can be transferred.

This amounts to approximately 1.5 per cent of the value of the estate (houses, bank accounts, investments, etc,…).

This is one of those taxes that must be paid up front.

Just remember, two things you can't avoid: death and taxes.

Easy decor details

Simple, decorative ideas you can get done in time for the holidays

DESIGN CENTRE

KARL LOHNES
HOME@METRONEWS.CA

It's hard to find time to take on decorating projects at this time of the year, so I've compiled three simple decorating touches that you can do on a budget and in less than an afternoon.

Darker days, darker doors

Impress guests with some drama when they come through the front door by painting your front door a deep, luxurious colour.

The trend of a dark pronounced exterior door is coming back in style as dark colours add a sense of sophistication and importance to the front entry.

Choose a dark colour that is 'almost black' in its tone; dark purples, greens and navy blue top my list, and if by standing at the road it looks almost black, then you have the right tone!

CONTRIBUTED

▶ Create drama by painting the inside and outside of your door a dark colour like purple, grey or navy.

Choose a high-gloss paint finish to add not only durability, but a glamourous sheen to the door. And while you are painting, why not wrap the colour around to the inside of the door? Adding that dark impact will do wonders to wake up your front foyer.

Colour coding

Looking for an easy way to choose the right paint colour for the front door? Look at the colour of the body of the house and choose the opposite on the colour wheel.

BENJAMIN MOORE PAINTS

▶ Benjamin Moore's Kalamata AF-630 is fall's hottest front door colour.

SCOTCH BLUE BRANDS.

▶ Ensure a crisp, clean edge by using professional painter's tape.

For instance, if you have yellow-ish brick or siding then choose a purple colour; if you have orange brick choose a blue or green colour; if you have greenish siding then choose a burgundy-red colour.

Opposites do attract!

Bedroom highs

Is the bedroom looking a little bare without a headboard?

Well, with a bit of paint, edging tape (try 3M's Edge-Lock blue Painter's Tape — it is new on the market and gives a crisp, clean edge to your paint job) and a level, you can create a faux headboard, which will add a focal point to your room.

For good proportions, measure the faux headboard six inches wider than your bed and at a height of around 52 inches (standard size).

To make the painted headboard blend into the room, choose a paint colour similar to the colour of your bedskirt or bed base.

When the paint is dry, lean some large pillows across the top of your mattress and you'll add a luxurious layered look to your bedroom.

CONTRIBUTED

▶ No headboard? No problem. Just pull out a brush and paint one on the wall.

Art tricks

You can use the same paint-blocking trick to make artwork look larger. Artwork is often purchased for the subject matter or colours, but may not be the right proportion for the wall space you intend to use it on.

A simple way to make a small piece of art look larger or to tie together a collection of smaller pieces of art is to tape off an area slightly larger than the art, paint a block of colour and you'll visually grow the overall scale of your artwork larger.

Let your furniture 'slip into something more comfortable'

Slipcovering your furniture with store bought or custom tailored covers is a great way to change up the look of your furniture seasonally, hide old outdated pieces or protect valuable furniture from fading, wear and tear.

Store bought slipcovers range from $35 to 200 and although do not offer a tailored fit, can give a clean, fresh look to worn or outdated furnishings.

The look will be casual and they are recommended for utility over high fashion.

Change it up

▶ Potato Skins is a custom slipcover company that can have your old furniture covered by Christmas.

Find Sure Fit Slipcovers online and at Sears.

The labour for making custom made slipcovers can cost from $50 to cover a dining chair and up to $600 for a sofa, plus the fabric you choose.

It generally takes one to four weeks to create a couture cover for your well-loved furniture.

Keeping warm this winter

Curling up with blankets and cups of cocoa is lovely — but not when it's necessary for indoor survival Here's a few tips for winterizing your home

DIY IDEAS

By following simple fall maintenance tips, you can save energy and stay warm this winter.

In every episode of 10 Grand in Your Hand host John DeSilvia shows homeowners how to cut up to $10,000 from their renovation and remodelling budgets by offering advice on new technologies and how-to information for doing it yourself.

Windows
Check for drafts by holding a lit candle near the seams of a closed window.

If the flame bends, there's a draft.

Check the exterior caulk for gaps and cracks that may need repair.

Remove all of the old caulking with caulk softener.

Polyurethane caulk works best for small and large gaps.

After thoroughly cleaning the surface, use the new caulk and run a wet finger overtop for a smooth finish.

After drying for 12-15 hours, your windows are ready for winter.

Fireplace
Wood-burning fireplaces should be cleaned and inspected before winter falls.

This will prevent chimney fires and carbon monoxide poisoning.

Attic
Make sure the insulation in your attic is installed properly.

The vapour barrier should be facing down toward the living space, otherwise it will trap moisture.

Cut small holes along the vapour barrier to allow the moisture to escape.

Furnace
Always clean and replace filters in your furnace or heating system.

Have your gas heater or furnace inspected and serviced to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide and smoke detectors
Every fall, check your carbon monoxide detectors and smoke alarm and install fresh batteries.

A smoke alarm can save lives in a house fire.

Keep a lid on it

Inspect your roof for wear and tear.

- Shingles that are curling, buckling or crackling need to be replaced.
- Flashing: Be sure to check the seams around skylights, pipes and chimneys.
- Keep the heat in: If there are any leaks or gaps, heavy snow and ice will find its way in — along with the cold.

HANDOUT

▶ Licensed contractor John DeSilvia hosts 10 Grand in Your Hand.

Carbon monoxide is an invisible and odourless byproduct of burning oil or natural gas — the detector will sound if these levels get too high.

DUST UP YOUR CLEANING SKILLS

CHARLES THE BUTLER

ASKCHARLES THEBUTLER@METRONEWS.CA
FOR MORE, VISIT CHARLES MACPHERSON.COM

Dear Charles the Butler,
How do you dust furniture correctly and safely?
Signed,
Betty in Toronto

Hello Betty,

Firstly, did you know that the world has twice as much dust today as it did in the last century? So yes, dusting is both important and necessary.

Secondly, when you don't dust, you attract grease to the surface that attracts even more dust. So dusting is very important!

So how do we dust easily and correctly? Well, the good news is that it's simple! To make your own dusting rags, use old cotton bed sheets that are cut or torn into large squares (24 x 24 inches).

Wet your hands under lukewarm running water, and then dry them with your dusting rag.

You now have the perfect amount of humidity in your dusting cloth to dust any surface and no chemicals or dusting products necessary.

This may sound overly simplified, but it is really easy and simple.

This is how museums dust so that they don't damage furniture and objects in their collections.

Remember don't add more water as too much moisture will damage the surfaces you are dusting.

HAVE A QUESTION? SEND AN EMAIL TO ASKCHARLESTHEBUTLER@METRONEWS.CA

Creamy and full of mushrooms, this dish will warm you up on these cooler evenings.

Bursting with rich robust flavours of brown mushrooms and pecorino romano cheese, it uses wild rice for a slightly different texture and flavour.

The risotti is best served with a crisp green salad.

THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

▶ This recipe serves four.

Ingredients:

- 1 L (4 cups) chicken or vegetable stock
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) butter
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) olive oil
- Half an onion, finely diced
- 1 large garlic clove, minced
- 250 ml (1 cup) brown and wild rice mixture
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) sea salt
- 1 ml (1/4 tsp) freshly ground black pepper
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) white wine
- 750 ml (3 cups) mixed baby mushrooms such as cremini, button and chanterelle
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) freshly grated pecorino romano cheese
- 5 ml (1 tsp) chopped fresh parsley

Preparation:

1. In saucepan, heat stock to a simmer.
2. In a separate large saucepan, heat 15 ml (1 tbsp) of the butter and oil on high and cook until melted and bubbly. Add onion and cook until softened, 3 to 5 minutes. Add garlic and stir.
3. Add rice and stir to coat thoroughly. Add a pinch each of the salt and pepper. Pour wine over rice and cook for 2 minutes until some of the alcohol boils off.
4. Add 2 ladlefuls of the hot stock to rice and stir well. Stir frequently as the stock starts to boil off and the rice begins to get soft. Add mushrooms.
5. Keep adding stock by ladleful, stirring every 2 minutes until all the stock is absorbed and the rice is thoroughly cooked through. This will take about 30 to 40 minutes with brown rice. If you run out of stock, add a bit of hot water.
6. Add remaining butter, cheese and parsley; stir to combine. Divide equally among 4 plates.

Upgrade scrambled eggs into a frittata

MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Swiss Chard, Mushroom & Tomato Frittata

A frittata is simply one of the best choices when a weeknight meal needs to get on the table fast.

Think of frittatas as scrambled eggs with other ingredients mixed in. And instead of cooking it entirely on the stovetop, it gets finished under the broiler. This creates a delicious lightly browned top .

Ingredients:

- 6 eggs
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) milk
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) dried thyme
- Pinch each salt, pepper
- 30 mL (2 tbsp) sun dried tomato oil from jar
- 125 g (4 oz) sliced white button mushrooms
- 1 onion, diced
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) chopped oil-packed sun-dried tomatoes
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 500 ml (2 cups)Swiss chard
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) shredded cheddar cheese

Preparation:

1. In a bowl, whisk eggs, milk and thyme. Add salt, pepper; set aside.
2. Heat sun dried tomato oil in oven-safe non-stick skillet over medium-high heat. Add onions, mushrooms, sun dried tomatoes and garlic. Sauté until onions are soft, about 5 minutes. Add chard and cook until just wilted.
3. Spread vegetables in an even layer over bottom of pan. Pour egg mix over them, then cook, without stirring, for 4 minutes, or until bottom has set. Sprinkle cheese over top of frittata.
4. Transfer the pan to the middle rack of the oven and broil until the frittata is puffed, lightly browned and firm at the centre, this takes about 2 to 3 minutes.
5. Remove pan from oven and cool slightly before slicing.

▶ Phil Kessel celebrates after getting an assist on a goal by Joffrey Lupul last night.

Phil Kessel is carrying the Toronto Maple Leafs on his back.

The red-hot forward had a goal and two assists last night as the Maple Leafs erased a two-goal deficit in the third period and beat the Winnipeg Jets 4-3 in a shootout.

Kessel extended his NHL lead in both goals and points on a night where Toronto appeared headed for its first regulation loss of the season until a late rally. He has seven goals and 12 points through five games.

About the only thing Kessel couldn't do was score in the shootout, but teammates Joffrey Lupul and Matt Frattin made sure it didn't matter by each beating Ondrej Pavelec during the tiebreaker.

Lupul added two goals in regulation for Toronto (4-0-1), which starts its first road trip of the season in Boston on Thursday night.

Mark Scheifele, with his first NHL goal, Tobias Enstrom and Alexander Burmistrov replied for Winnipeg (1-3-1).

The home team put on an ugly performance through 40 minutes, registering just 12 shots while getting serenaded with boos during disorganized stretches with the man advantage.

That changed quickly with power-play goals just 27 seconds apart early in the third period. Lupul's shot deflected off Enstrom's stick and past Pavelec at 7:28 before Kessel one-timed a Dion Phaneuf pass home to tie the game 3-3 at 7:55.

He leapt into the arms of teammates as the Air Canada Centre came alive.

Toronto has received almost all of its offence from the first line of Kessel, Lupul and Tyler Bozak while earning nine of a possible 10 points to start the season.

It began as a promising night for Winnipeg in its first visit to a Canadian city. A number of fans turned up wearing Jets sweaters and the Leafs rolled out the welcome mat with a scoreboard tribute during a stoppage in play early in the first period. In-game announcer Andy Frost, who was born and raised in Winnipeg, voiced the minute-long video and fans responded with a standing ovation.

Shortly after, Enstrom made it 1-0 with Winnipeg's first power-play goal of the season. He fired a shot through all kinds of traffic that eluded James Reimer at 9:49.

Lupul tied it up less than two minutes later with a one-timer that shattered the lens of the in-goal camera. Kessel made a nice play to beat two defenders before finding Lupul — a telling sign of things to come.

Winnipeg pulled ahead 3-1 in the middle period. Burmistrov completed a give-and-go with former Leaf Nik Antropov at 2:27 before Scheifele scored on the power play just over five minutes later.

The rookie centre was parked at the side of the goal for about 10 seconds before knocking a rebound past Reimer. Scheifele is from nearby Kitchener and pumped his fists as friends and family in the arena cheered loudly from the stands.

Toronto was booed off the ice after 40 minutes. Kessel made sure the fans were cheering again before the end of the night.

Governor backs new home for Vikings

Gov. Mark Dayton said yesterday he's ready to throw his political weight behind a new, publicly subsidized football stadium that would be built on a site preferred by the Minnesota Vikings.

The Vikings have sought a replacement for the Metrodome for nearly a decade, calling the venue no longer sufficiently profitable. The team's lease runs out at the end of the season.

Cardinals take Series opener

St. Louis kicks off World Series with win at home
Craig's pinch-hit single secures win over Rangers

Pinch-hitter Allen Craig singled in the go-ahead run off reliever Alexi Ogando in the sixth inning with a sinking line drive that dropped just in front of right-fielder Nelson Cruz, and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Texas Rangers 3-2 last night in a chilly World Series opener.

On a night when all the runs were driven in with opposite-field hits to right, Lance Berkman put St. Louis ahead with a two-run single in the fourth against C.J. Wilson. Catcher Mike Napoli watched in dejection as Albert Pujols and Matt Holliday scored but a few minutes later he celebrated in the top of the fifth when he tied it 2-2 with his drive off Chris Carpenter.

Carpenter got the win, allowing five hits in six innings, and Jason Motte got his fifth post-season save. Wilson walked a career-high six in 5⅔ innings and took the loss.

Colby Lewis starts for the Rangers in Game 2 on Thursday night against Jaime Garcia.

Pujols had Cardinals fans cheering in the top of the sixth when he slid to stop Michael Young's grounder behind first and threw to Carpenter for the out, stranding Ian Kinsler at third.

Then in the bottom half, NLCS MVP David Freese hit an opposite-field double to right with one out and took third on a wild pitch. Wilson struck out Yadier Molina, then pitched carefully to Nick Punto and walked him on four pitches.

Ogando relieved, and with many of the red-clad Cardinals fans standing and waving white towels, Craig sliced a 1-2 pitch down the right-field line. Cruz, the ALCS MVP, tried for a sliding catch, but the ball bounced just in front of his glove for a single as Freese scored. Texas was lucky that the ball struck Cruz on a foot; otherwise, it would have rolled to the fence.

Carpenter became the first St. Louis starter to reach the sixth inning since the division series. He allowed two runs and five hits in six innings, struck out four and walked one. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Amore, Baby you are so good to me, I couldn't imagine life without you, ever! You've got the love I need & I want you to know I love you more today than I did yesterday! PER SEMPRE

My Lovely Princess Missing those big blue beautiful eyes n smile of yours. Looking forward for big birthday party in less than two weeks. Keep your head up n don't forget to smile. :):) haha..LOL PC

Pablo, We kinda talked in gr.9 but it was in Eng 10 when we really got to know each other and we never looked back. Its been over two years since we have been together & they have been amazing. It just sucks that I can't see you everyday like I use to since I'm in college and you are in high school but always remember one thing, "I L word you." BOB

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Someone in a position of authority can threaten or bribe you, but you won't lose sight of your principles.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You would be wise to watch your back over the next 24 hours. According to the planets, a rival is plotting.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You may not want to give up on a project but you have no choice. It would take cash to keep going.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Deep down, you know what must be done but you seem to be waiting for a sign. Trust your gut instead.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You may be tempted to hold out for a better offer but that may not be such a good idea. Seal the deal.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 If you believe things will go badly, they may. You'll feel better when the Sun changes signs this weekend.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 The best way to deal with someone who refuses to see sense is to let him or her go. He or she will learn.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 In a matter of days, you will confound your critics and do something extraordinary.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Give others the impression that you don't really care whether you win or lose — then strike.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Don't dwell on your failures. You can't change the past so why waste time thinking about it?

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Something seems to be bothering you deeply and your rivals have picked up on the scent of your fear.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. Why are you trying to live up to an unture image? Don't try to be someone else. SALLY BROMPTON
